

Multi-Step Research Workflow

Cowork researches across sources. You decide.

Some decisions need more than a single answer — they need a brief. This week you have Cowork research a real topic across three or more sources, synthesize it into one document, and surface the tensions and the uncertainties instead of pretending there's one clean answer. Then you read it and you decide. The tool gathers; the watchman judges.

THE ACTION

- Pick a real topic you owe a decision on this week — a purchase, a strategy, a position.
- Have Cowork research it across 3+ sources and synthesize into one brief.
- Require it to surface the disagreements and what's uncertain — not just a tidy summary.
- Read the brief, make the call, and write one line on why. Decide by Friday.

SYNTHESIS IS NOT A VERDICT

AI can gather and arrange, but it can't bear the weight of the decision — that's yours, and it always will be. Read the brief, then own the call.

SCRIPTURE

Proverbs 18:17 — "The first one to plead his cause seems right, until his neighbor comes and examines him." A good research brief brings the neighbor — the other side — before you decide.